

ABSTRACT

Apparatus, methods and articles of manufacture for construction and execution of computerized transaction processes comprising one or more Order Management Systems in a distributed computing environment. The various embodiments construct the Order Management System from of cooperating service components, an in memory cache, and a client API. Use of a toolkit of these components provides an ability to customize an Order Management System.